The Biochemical Society exists to advance the science of biochemistry through meetings and publications. Several meetings a year are held, each at a different place; original papers are presented and special topics are discussed at symposia and colloquia.

Persons interested in biochemistry are eligible for election as Members. Details of further facilities accorded to Members, and forms of application for membership, are available from the Executive Secretary, The Biochemical Society, 7 Warwick Court, London WC1R 5DP [01-242 1076 (4 lines)].

The major publication of the Biochemical Society is the Biochemical Journal. Contributors (who need not be members of the Biochemical Society) may be interested to know that the Journal places emphasis on prompt publication of both full-length papers (on average about 6 months after receipt) and rapid papers (on average 10–12 weeks after receipt).

The Journal makes no manuscript handling charges, no page charges and no charges for plates.

Reprints are available at modest cost at about the same time as publication, and, if an author is a member of the Biochemical Society, 50 reprints are provided free of charge.

Second-class postage paid at New York, NY, U.S.A.
The Biochemical Journal is published and distributed by the Biochemical Society. It is published twice monthly, alternate issues being devoted to Molecular Aspects and to Cellular Aspects of biochemistry. It is planned that in 1977 eight volumes, each volume being made up of three issues, will be published according to the following schedule:

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

It is the policy of the Biochemical Journal to publish papers in English in all fields of biochemistry, provided that they make a sufficient contribution to biochemical knowledge. Papers may include new results obtained experimentally, descriptions of new experimental methods of biochemical importance, or new interpretations of existing results. Theoretical contributions will be considered equally with papers dealing with experimental work. All work presented should have as its aim the development of biochemical concepts rather than the mere recording of facts. Preliminary or inconclusive experiments should not generally be described.

Two types of paper are accepted by the editors.

Full-length papers. Papers submitted for publication should be sent, preferably in duplicate, together with an extra copy of the synopsis, to the Editorial Secretary, The Biochemical Journal, 7 Warwick Court, London WC1R 5DP. Typescripts should bear the name and address of the person to whom the proof of the paper is to be sent.

Papers submitted should be written concisely. Special attention is directed to the sections below concerning the preparation of the typescript. Typescripts that are not concise or do not conform to the conventions of the Biochemical Journal will be returned to the authors for revision. If a paper that has been returned to an author for revision is not resubmitted within one month, it will, on resubmission, be deemed to be a new paper and the date of receipt altered accordingly. A revised paper containing a significant amount of new material will also be redated.

Submission of a paper to the Editorial Board implies that it has been approved by all the named authors, that it reports unpublished work, that it is not under consideration for publication elsewhere, and that if accepted for the Biochemical Journal it will not be published elsewhere in the same form, either in English or in any other language, without the consent of the Editorial Board.

Papers should be headed by a concise but informative full title, by the names of the authors (preferably with one forename in full, with initials, for each author) and by the name and address of the establishment where the work was performed. Details of financial support appear in the acknowledgements at the end of the paper.

Before preparing papers authors should consult a current issue of the Journal to make themselves familiar with the general format, such as the use of cross-headings, lay-out of tables and citation of references. Papers should be in double-spaced typing throughout (including the references and legends of tables and figures) on sheets of uniform size with wide margins. The top copy should be submitted. Submission of a duplicate typescript in addition may avoid delay. It cannot be overemphasized that the need for revision of badly prepared typescripts inevitably leads to delays in publication.

Papers on specialized subjects should be presented so that they are intelligible to the ordinary reader of the Journal. Sufficient information must be included to permit repetition of the experimental work.

Rapid Papers. Typescripts should be submitted in duplicate, written in English, and conform strictly to the form of the Journal as far as spelling and abbreviations are concerned. Each rapid paper should be provided with a short synopsis (normally not exceeding 50 words). Such papers should not exceed 2400 words in length inclusive of the title, references etc. Authors may include insertions (preferably not more than two) such as tables, figures or schemes; in these cases authors must assess what proportion of a page these insertions will occupy and reduce the number of text words accordingly at the rate of 700 words per full page of the Journal. Authors are advised that the preparation of tables and especially figures is liable to cause an increase in publication time. In no circumstances whatsoever can a complete rapid paper occupy more than four pages of the Journal. Papers should be complete in themselves: (1) the methods used in experimental work must be adequately described or sufficient reference given to allow repetition of the work; (2) sufficient indication of the results of experimental work must be included to justify the claims made. Rapid papers should be addressed to the Editorial Secretary, The Biochemical Journal, 7 Warwick Court, London WC1R 5DP.
